MORGAN'S ESCAPE.

FAMOUS GENERAL WAS SAID TO HAVE HAD ASSISTANCE.

Acting on Thomas Bullitt's Suggestion Officers Find That the Prisoners Dug Out.

LIGHT ON MYSTERY OF HIS ESCAPE.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 24.—A remarkable discovery was made at the penitentiary this morning, which removes suspicion from the administration of Warden Marion, who was at the head of the penitentiary when John Morgan, the Confederate General and a band of his famous "raiders" escaped from the institution on the night of November 28, 1863.

General Morgan and his men were confined as prisoners of war. Their escape was mysterious, and there has long been a suspicion that it was effected through some sort of intrigue with the officials of the prison. The mystery has now been cleared and these suspicions set aside.

The men dug their way from their cells and then dug their way out under one of the prison walls. According to history, all then went to the Union Station and took different trains for Cincinnati, and from there crossed the Ohio river into more hospitable territory. John Morgan was afterward killed. Others of the party have died. One remains in the person of Thomas W. Bullitt, of Kentucky. To him are due the credit of the investigation and the subsequent important discoveries.

A few days ago Mr. Bullitt wrote to a friend named Frank D. Swoop, of Louisville, and asked him to see if a search could not be made by the officials of the Ohio penitentiary for a knife which he had left hidden near his cell when he escaped from there more than 35 years ago. The letter was sent to Manager McCormick and was later sent to Superintendent J. C. Laney, with instructions to institute a search. The search was started, and in view of the important discoveries made, it has been decided to make still further investigations.

In his letter Mr. Bullitt inclosed a diagram of the cell he occupied and the location of an air chamber through which he had made his exit from prison. With the aid of the diagram the air chamber was located and found to be large enough to admit a man. This was the first time it had been examined for more than 35 years. The wall of the place was covered with cobwebs and there was a small hole which might have at one time been the hole of a rat. The investigation had not proceeded far when a huge knife was found. It was so rusted with age that it is now handled carefully to keep it from falling to pieces. The handle of it was broken off in pulling it out, and it practically crumbled to pieces in the effort to pick it up.

One important thing was revealed by the discovery of an old pile of dirt opposite the wall under cell No. 31. It was the cell in which Morgan was confined, and he afterward made the statement that he had tunneled through under the wall almost opposite his cell. The first matter was to find the exact location of the dirt pile with reference to the numbers of the cells. It was found to be opposite the famous cell No. 21. After some digging along the wall a place was found where a large stone had been moved from the wall. That agrees with John Morgan's statement. The general character of the place indicated that Morgan and his men escaped as a result of their own effort and that Warden Marion was unjustly accused of aiding them.

Stories of Morgan's escape printed at the time of his daring adventure are different from the one given above. It was stated at the time that the prisoners dug through the floor of a cell to a sewer. This floor was composed of stone and bricks and was a foot in thickness. With only knives for tools the prisoners were reported to have made a hole through this floor, their work being concealed by boards which had been fastened to shield them from the bare stones. This hole opened into a sewer located beneath the prison.

General Morgan and his six companions—Captains Bennett, Sheldon, Haines, Hackett, Smith and Magee—were reported at the time of the escape to have followed the sewer to its end, but they could not get through the iron grating at the mouth. They dug a hole upward, but happened to strike a pile of coal, which fell upon them. Another hole was then made upward. It came to the surface just outside the wall of the prison. This circumstance aroused the suspicion that someone inside the prison had informed the prisoners of the location of the prison wall.

On the night of the escape, General John Morgan managed to change places with his brother, "Dick," who was also a prisoner. They enabled the leader of the raiders to get in a cell on the ground tier, and thus to escape. It may be mentioned that in the published list of those who escaped with Morgan the name of Bullitt does not appear, nor does it among the list of officers reported to have been taken with Morgan.

The Death of a Bird.

The bird was dead. It lay, a tiny, fluffy, golden hen in the bottom of the cage, and the two little children, whose pet it had been, stood and looked at it in awed silence. It was the first time they had been brought face to face with the great mystery of life and death, and they asked of their elders, as they, in turn, had asked of philosophy and reason, "What was life and death?" and to never come there any answer. By and by the little watchers by the side of the dead bird were made to understand that never again would their tiny friend awaken at daybreak with his joyous song; that he would perch no more on their hands, or crane his head to one side with funny looks of unutterable wisdom, that the gay heart was stilled, and that all that was left was this little heap of yellow feathers, lying mute and still at the bottom of the cage. Then the full sense of desolation and loss swept over them, and they wept as if their poor baby hearts were broken. "We want our Dickie back," they cried passionately; "we don't want him to be dead. Make him alive again." And their elders explained to them the first great lesson of the inevitable submission to fate, and told them that for all men's boasted achievements in science, and for all the wisdom of the centuries there was not one who could breathe back the breath of life into a dead bird.

A BILLION A YEAR.

DINGLEY LAW WILL CAUSE CONTINUANCE OF WAR TAX.

Republican Extravagance of 1890 a Mere Bagatelle in Comparison With the Present.

EXPENSE OF THE SPANISH WAR.

The Republican party lost control of the House of Representatives in 1890 chiefly because the appropriations made by the Fifty-first Congress footed up more than $1,000,000,000. That Congress likewise passed the McKinley tariff bill and the Sherman silver bill, but its principal offense in the popular estimation was its prodigal expenditure of the people's money. The "billion-dollar Congress" became a term of reproach, and few of its leading members on the Republican side escaped the whirlwind of public wrath at the elections of 1890. The extravagance of the Fifty-first Congress paved the way for the second election of Grover Cleveland.

But compared with the present body the Fifty-first Congress might be called penurious. The appropriations for the current fiscal year aggregated nearly $1,000,000,000. Of course, the war with Spain increased expenses, but nothing like as much as is generally believed. The Spanish war is happily ended, but no signs of economy and retrenchment in public expenditures are seen.

For the year ending June 30, 1900, there will be appropriated $145,000,000 for pensions, $150,000,000 for the army and $50,000,000 for the navy. This means that the military establishment alone will cost nearly $350,000,000 for the next fiscal year. The total appropriations will not fall far short of $800,000,000, and many of the leaders of both parties in Congress believe the annual expenses will be a little while foot up to a round $1,000,000,000.

Fully $75,000,000 a year will be required for many years to maintain military garrisons in Cuba, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines. This sum will be practically lost to the United States, as most of it will be returned to this country. Nobody believes the possession of the islands will be worth annually $75,000,000 to the United States. There is not much doubt that the Nicaragua canal will be constructed within the next decade at a cost of about $150,000,000. So that everything indicates a steady increase in the annual expenditures of the government.

The situation is such that if the war tax should be repealed the country would soon become insolvent and be compelled to raise money by issuing bonds to meet the ordinary expenditures.

A glance at the treasury statements shows the financial condition of the government. We received $200,000,000 from the bond loan last summer. The exorbitant rates are bringing in nearly $15,000,000 a month. The expenses of the war have not yet amounted to $300,000,000. Yet in spite of the proceeds of the bond sale and the receipts from the exorbitant rates, the deficit for the current fiscal year now amounts to $84,000,000 and is constantly growing. The bond loan has more than paid the expenses of the war, so that but for the exorbitant tax the deficit under the Dingley tariff would now exceed $150,000,000.

Who Is To Blame. Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys.

If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches the age when it should be able to control the passage, and it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

If the adult has rheumatism; pain or dolours in the back; if the water passes in irregular quantities; or at irregular intervals or has a bad odor; if it stains the linen or vessel the color of rust; if the feet swell; if there are puffiness or dark circles under the eyes; your kidneys are the cause and need doctoring. Treatment of some diseases may be delayed without danger, not so with kidney disease.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy promptly cures the most distressing cases. Its mild and extraordinary effect is soon realized. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle and pamphlet telling all about it sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The Case of Mormon Roberts.

Brigham H. Roberts was elected to the next Congress by the people of Utah. He is not only a Mormon in religious faith, with which our government has nothing whatever to do, but he is a polygamist, and if he shall attempt hospitable life in Washington he has three wives to grace the entertainment of his guests.

The question of his admission as a member of Congress is now very generally agitated throughout the country. The laws of the land forbid polygamy, and polygamy in Utah was expressly forbidden by the laws of the nation while they governed that Territory. The enforcement of the anti-polygamy law was attended with great difficulty, but the law finally triumphed to the extent of halting new polygamists marriages. But for the fact that polygamy had been practically abolished in Utah, that territory never could have been admitted as a State.

As Utah is now a sovereign State it is not within the power of the national government to regulate its local affairs, but the House of Representatives is made by the Constitution the sole judge of the election and qualification of its members, and from its judgment there can be no appeal. It is empowered not only to decide who has been elected in disputed cases, but it has no power, and has often exercised it, of passing upon the qualification of claimants for a seat in the body. The general rule observed relating to the qualification of members is that if the people of a district have elected a Congressman with the full knowledge of the accusations made against him, they are presented as a ground for refusing him admission, the judgment of his constituents would be accepted as a guide for the House; but the case of Mr. Roberts differs very materially from that rule.

True, he was elected with the full knowledge of the voters that he is a polygamist, but polygamy being at war with the whole theory and genius of our free government, it is entirely competent for the House to declare him ineligible to serve as a national lawmaker.

We believe that Mr. Roberts should be refused admission to the House. His election is not only an insult to the people of the nation outside a few who practice bigamy within the folds of the Mormon State, but it is an insult to the national honor and the honor of the people of the world.

If Mr. Roberts shall be admitted to Congress he would have the high sanction of the nation for the admission of the polygamist into any and every public position in the land, and it would be a consuming shame upon our national honor. No such man could enter a national legislative body in any other of the enlightened nations of the world, and the great republic that stands for the liberty of law should not have this stain upon its escutcheon.

Piling up the Load of Taxation.

(The Manchester, N. H., Union.) There is unusual activity at the present time in the business of organizing trusts. The seeds of the latest Republican tariff iniquity are rapidly bringing fruit, and the taxes which the people are compelled to pay in advancing prices are pressing down more heavily upon them. Meanwhile the Republican administration leaders, absolutely unafraid of these consequences of tariff oppression, are preparing to burden the American people with an additional load of taxation through the annexation of the Philippine islands.

Medal in a Cow's Stomach.

(Chicago Journal.) In the stomach of a cow slaughtered in Armour's plant at the stock yards last week was found a gold medal in the form of a Maltese cross, which has been positively identified and returned to its owner, who lost it while a school girl seventeen years of age on one of the prairie paths of Texas.

The history of the trinket's adventures was brought to light only after advertisements had been published in the newspapers throughout Texas. These notices described the medal as having the name "Ida May Work," and the year "1881" engraved on its reverse side. One of these arrows fired at random found a mark in Albuquerque, N. M.

It was learned that Miss Work had grown to be a woman in the intervening years, and that she had little girls of her own. She read the advertisement, wrote up to the men at Armour's, and received the medal.

The story of the golden cross, which came from the Lone Star State in the cow's stomach, probably would never have been told had it not been for several sharp-eyed meat inspectors who were watching the killing of beefs that day.

"One of the men noticed the glint of the gold," said Inspector Geo. H. Lytle, "and we all gathered around to see what it was. We found it to be a medal, and the following inscription was engraved on it:

Presented to
IDA MAY WORK
By the
Fort Worth Sanitary, 1881

"Fred Shaw, superintendent of the meat house, made inquiries and found that that batch of cattle was shipped from Dallas, Tex. He wrote to the Postmaster at Dallas, asking if he knew where Ida May Work could be found.

"The postmaster replied that the Work family had formerly lived in that city, but the older members were dead and the others had moved away. As a last resort, Mr. Shaw decided to publish advertisements for the owner.

"We did not hear anything more of the matter, and had almost forgotten our mysterious medal, when a letter came from the woman in New Mexico. She said she was the owner of the medal and was overjoyed at learning it had been found. It appeared that she had received it as a reward of merit while a pupil in the Fort Worth Sanitary. One day she was riding a horse over the prairie near Dallas and was thrown off. Her mount ran away and in the confusion she lost the Maltese cross and another similar medal she had worn that day.

"She searched a long time for them, but could not find either one. Her explanation was considered sufficient and we immediately sent her the medal."

She expressed surprise that the bit of gold should have found its way into the stomach of a cow and in that manner be carried to Chicago, where it once more saw the light. The case puzzles the men at the stock yards just as much as it does the owner.

It is explained that often small nails are found in what is called the first stomach of a cow. Some time ago a $5 gold piece was taken from a slaughtered steer and now adorns the watch chain of the superintendent of the killing camp. It is supposed that the Maltese cross was swallowed by the cow while she was grazing on the prairie and lodged in the stomach just as other foreign articles do.

YOU should know that Foley's Honey and Tar is absolutely the best remedy for all diseases of the Throat, Chest or Lungs. Dealers are authorized to guarantee it to give satisfaction in all cases. For sale by J. H. Williams.

Citizenship by Consent.

(From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.) Ex-Artillery-General Miller raises a very interesting question. He points out that only last March the Supreme Court decided that any child born within United States territory—even through both its parents be Chinese—is an American citizen and cannot be excluded from his rights as such. Judge Miller suggests that if we make United States territory out of the Philippines by any form of annexation we shall make American citizens of everybody born there. The outlook for an influx of "Chinese labor" after annexation seems interesting to say the least.

Get a Start On Catarrh

And Save Endless Suffering which Winter Brings.

The most offensive of all diseases becomes more intense as cold weather approaches. In fact, many who have been under treatment for so long, and during the summer feel little discomfort from the disease, are almost persuaded that they have been cured. But the first chilling blast of winter proves that the disease is still with them, and as the winter advances, their Catarrh grows in severity. Those who have felt only a slight touch of Catarrh may be sure that only cold weather is needed to develop the disease. What appears to be only a bad cold will prove more difficult to cure than formerly, and will return with more frequency, until before long the disease is fully developed.

"For years I suffered from a severe case of Catarrh, and took several kinds of medicines and used various local applications, but they had no effect whatever. I was induced to try S. S. S. (Swift's Specific
